Statement 1 is correct: There was an unprecedented boom in the Indian trade and industry after the outbreak of World War I due to the increased demand of Indian goods from the allies. This made the prices of essential commodities and services sky high and the wages could not catch up with the increasing cost of living and resulted in the agitation of the worker class. The Russian revolution of 1917 and the establishment of the USSR held out the prospect of a new social order to the workers.

Statement 2 is incorrect: The Madras labour union (1918), was the first trade union of modern type in India. The president of this organization was B. P Wadia, an active member of the Home Rule movement.

All India Trade Union Congress organised by N M Joshi in 1920 was an amalgamation of 64 trade unions and was presided by Lala Lajpat Rai.

Statement 1 is correct: The British lost total control over Ernad and Walluvanad taluks of the Malabar region for several months due to the rebellion. Republics were established at several places by the Moplahs under leaders like Ali Musaliar, Khunhammad Haji etc. There was widespread attack on police stations, government offices and houses of oppressive landlords and money lenders.

Statement 2 is correct: Oppression and exploitation of the Muslim Moplah peasants of the Malabar region by the Hindu Zamindars and British government was the main cause of the revolt. It was anti british as well as anti zamindar and to some extent anti hindu also because most of the local zamindars were Hindus.

Statement 3 is incorrect: At Podnur, 66 Moplah prisoners were shut in a railway wagon and died of suffocation. It was due to the severe repression they experienced by the British. The outbreak of the rebellion was due to the raid by the police on Thirurangadi Mosque in search of arms.

Statement 1 is correct: The way peasant organizations emerged in different parts of India strongly indicated their agitational character. The peasant organizations were basically agrarian agitations rather than 'parties' or 'organizations' in the strict sense. Peasant movements were essentially transitory in character as their revolution increased or decreased with their grievances being addressed or not.

Statement 2 is correct: The peasant parties failed to establish an all India phenomenon and their success was only regional. Despite their best efforts, none of them ever succeeded in building up a strong disciplined revolutionary organisation.

Statement 3 is incorrect: There was absence of a fixed ideology amongst the peasant movements. Their ideologies shifted between Gandhism on one hand and Marxism- Leninism on the other hand. Varying emphasis on ends and means and a curious mixture of the two combined with Fabian Socialism often characterized their concepts, demands, and overall agrarian policies. With time the peasant parties gradually moved away from the Gandhian approach and came closer to Marxism and Communism.

Statement 4 is correct: The peasant movements failed to grasp the diversity and complexity of agrarian structures in India and also to understand the developing agrarian crisis and class contradictions in rural society. There was confusion and divided motive among the peasants in defining basic agrarian problems and priorities and led to an ideological difference.

- Statement 2 is Incorrect: From the second century BCE onwards, the pattern of patronage has been a very collective one and there are very few examples of royal patronage. Patrons range from lay devotees to gahapatis and kings. Donations by the guilds are also mentioned at several sites. However, there are very few inscriptions mentioning the names of artisans such as Kanha at Pitalkhora and his disciple Balaka at Kondane caves in Maharashtra. Artisans' categories like stone carvers, goldsmiths, stone-polishers, carpenters, etc. are also mentioned in the inscriptions. Hence, although names of patrons were commonly mentioned, mentioning names of artisans was an exception.
- Statement 3 is Correct: During the period of Ashoka, the art of stupas reached its climax. Almost 84,000 stupas were erected during his period.

This period of Mewari painting focuses on Sahibdin's depiction of literary texts – the Ragamala, the Ramayana and the Bhagavata Purana. The unique point of this period is the extraordinary 'tamasha' paintings that show court ceremonial and city views in unprecedented detail.
- Option B is correct: Marwar school of painting developed in Bikaner, Jodhpur and Jaisalmer. Kishangarh School and Bundi School are the prominent schools that come under Marwar school. Paintings at Kishangarh are associated with the most romantic legends – Sawant Singh and his beloved Bani Thani, and intertwining of lives and myths, romance and bhakti. Many paintings on the devotional and amorous relations between Radha and Krishna have also been created.

- Option C is incorrect: Guler-Kangra school of painting developed due to migration of Mughal artists to the region after the decline of Mughal empire. The popular subjects were the Gita Govinda, Bhagwata Purana, Satsai of Biharilal and Nal Damayanti. Love scenes of Krishna were a very prominent theme. Another very famous group of paintings is the 'Twelve months' where the artist tried to bring forth the effect of the 12 months on the emotions of human beings.
- Option D is correct: The Thanjavur or Tanjore School is famous for the special style of decorative paintings. These paintings are unique as they are mostly created on glass and wooden planks (Palagai padam) instead of cloth and vellum as preferred in North India. They are unique because of the use of brilliant colour patterns and the liberal use of gold leaf. It has been recognised as Geographical Indication (GI) by the Government of India.

- Statement 1 is incorrect: The largest number of paintings at Bhimbetka belong to the Mesolithic period. During this period the themes multiply but the paintings are smaller in size. Hunting scenes predominate. The hunting scenes depict people hunting in groups, armed with barbed spears, pointed sticks, arrows and bows.
- Statement 2 is incorrect: Mesolithic paintings at Bhimbetka and other sites also depict men and women, young and old. Male figures often look like matchsticks, while women are sometimes given fuller forms. The Mesolithic artists loved to paint animals. In some pictures, animals are chasing men. In others they are being chased and hunted by men. These paintings also reflect emotions such as some of the animal paintings, especially in the hunting scenes, show a fear of animals, but many others show a feeling of tenderness and love for them.
- Statement 3 is correct: The paintings reflect a division of labour on the basis of gender. Men hunt and women are shown gathering and preparing food, for instance grinding food on querns. Basket-like containers must have been used to store food, but no pottery is depicted.

- Different animals have evolved the following adaptive features to live in arid environments.
 - Nocturnal Lifestyle: Most desert animals are nocturnal and seek shade or burrow deep in the soil in the day time to avoid excessive heat and dryness
 - Fast movement: Desert animals move much faster than other land animals, since they have to travel long distances in search of food and water.
 - Migration: Majority of birds and mammals of arid zones migrate when water becomes scarce or as a result of drought or for other reasons like scarcity of food supply.
 - Impervious skin: The drier habitats are invaded by only those animals which contain a thick impermeable body covering. This allows for water retention by preventing the loss of water and salt through sweat glands in heat regulation.
 - Upturned nostrils: Desert animals have nostrils directed upwards: this provides protection from clogging by wind blown sand.
 - Deceptive Colouration: Desert animals are usually grey, brown or red matching with the colour of the sand or rock.
 - Dry excretion: A further water saving device is the excretion of concentrated, relatively dry nitrogenous and faecal waste materials. Water saving insects, reptiles and birds excrete nitrogenous waste as solid uric acid.
 - Heat loss by radiation: Some desert animals have large ears that reduce the need of water evaporation to regulate the body temperature. Their ears function as efficient radiators to maintain body temperature.

- Due to the binding of virus with the viral receptors recovered patients might at times continue to carry very low levels of the virus within their system for around three months. Infection developed from such a persistent virus is called Persistent viral shedding. It can be detected in diagnostic tests. Throughout this ongoing process, infected individuals, who may not yet be experiencing any of the viral symptoms, are shedding viral particles while they talk, exhale, eat, and perform other normal daily activities.
- Persistently PCR positive individuals present elevated SARS-CoV-2-specific CD8 immune responses, thus providing new insight on the fundamental role played by T-cell immune responses in protecting against and eventually eradicating this new coronavirus.

- Statement 1 is incorrect: TRIFED (Tribal Cooperative Marketing Development Federation of India) under Ministry of Tribal Affairs launched 100 day drive called “Sankalp se Siddhi” - Village & Digital Connect Drive
- Statement 2 is correct: The main aim of this drive is to activate the Van Dhan Vikas Kendras in villages. Among all of TRIFED’s initiatives that have been put in place to help the disadvantaged tribal sections of the society, the Scheme, Mechanism for Marketing of Minor Forest Produce (MFP) Through Minimum Support Price (MSP) & Development of Value Chain for MFP’ that provides MSP to gatherers of forest produce and introduces value addition and marketing through tribal groups and clusters and Van Dhan Vikas Kendras has found widespread acceptance across the country. Especially during the pandemic in 2020, this scheme has emerged as a panacea for the tribals. Identification of tribal artisans and other groups under this initiative and empanel them as suppliers so that they can have access to larger markets through the Tribes India network – both physical outlets and TribesIndia.com

- The melting of Antarctica's Thwaites Glacier – also called the “Doomsday Glacier” – has long been a cause of concern because of its high potential of speeding up the global sea level rise happening due to climate change. Thwaites Glacier is an unusually broad and vast Antarctic glacier flowing into Pine Island Bay, part of the Amundsen Sea, east of Mount Murphy, on the Walgreen Coast of Marie Byrd Land
- Thwaites Glacier is 120 km wide at its broadest, fast-moving, and melting fast over the years. Because of its size (1.9 lakh square km), it contains enough water to raise the world sea level by more than half a metre. Studies have found the amount of ice flowing out of it has nearly doubled over the past 30 years.

- Statement 1 is incorrect: Galathea National Park is a National Park located in the Union Territory of Andaman and Nicobar Islands, India. It is located on the island of Great Nicobar in the Nicobar Islands.
- Statement 2 is correct: The total area of this park is some 110 square kilometres, and it was gazetted as a National Park of India in 1992. The Galathea National Park comprises the core area of the southern part of the Biosphere Reserve in Great Nicobar Island and consists of lowland forests which have the greatest abundance of endemic avifauna. It is the prime nesting habitat of the Nicobar Megapode and possibly the area of other endemic species too.

- Statement 3 is correct : India's National Marine Turtle Action Plan that was under preparation then (it was released on February 1, 2021) had listed Galathea Bay as one of the 'Important Coastal and Marine Biodiversity Areas' and 'Important Marine Turtle Habitats' in the country. It is included in Coastal Regulation Zone (CRZ)-I, the zone with maximum protection. The beaches are among the most prominent nesting sites globally of the Giant leatherback. It is for this reason that the bay was declared a wildlife sanctuary in 1997, but has now been denotified to allow for the transshipment port.
